Electoral Dispute Resolution: Managing Team Dynamics in Election Petitions

By: Prof. Tom Ojienda, SC*

1 Introduction

Electoral dispute resolution (EDR) is a key component of the electoral process, especially in furtherance of democracy and the principle of free and fair elections. Electoral disputes can occur pre-election or post-election. EDR mechanisms in Kenya are provided for under the Constitution of Kenya, 2010 (the Constitution), electoral statutes and regulations, and political party documents such as political party constitutions; the electoral laws. EDR mechanisms are administrative and quasi-judicial, especially as pertains to intra-party pre-election disputes, and judicial, more so as concerns post-election disputes.¹

He represents various individuals, State agencies, private entities, county governments and multinational agencies. He has represented these entities before Kenyan courts, from the subordinate courts, all the way to the Supreme Court of Kenya. Some of his landmark cases at the apex Court

Administrative and quasi-judicial EDR mechanisms are the political parties’ internal dispute resolution mechanisms (IDRM), the Independent Electoral and Boundaries Commission (IEBC) mechanisms (that is, the Dispute Resolution Committee, the Electoral Code of Conduct Enforcement Committee, and the Constituency Peace Committees), and the Political Parties Disputes Tribunal (PPDT). Judicial EDR mechanisms means the election courts, which are vested with special electoral jurisdiction, that is, designated Resident Magistrates’ Courts, the High Court, the Court of Appeal, and the Supreme Court of Kenya when sitting as such.

Effective EDR mechanisms are central in ensuring a peaceful and credible electoral process and must, therefore, be able to deal with any form of challenge that may arise due to a disputed electoral process and outcome. As a consequence, it is imperative that the administrative, quasi-judicial, and judicial bodies mandated to hear and determine electoral disputes adjudicate the process in a free and fair manner pursuant to article 50(1) of the Constitution. In Moses Mwicigi & 14 others v Independent Electoral and Boundaries Commission & 5 others, the Supreme Court was categorical that:

One of the objectives of our Constitution is the establishment of firm institutions, that have a pivotal role in its implementation. Our electoral dispute-resolution regime has a

2 Article 50(1) of the Constitution guarantees the right to a fair hearing and provides that, ‘Every person has the right to have any dispute that can be resolved by the application of law decided in a fair and public hearing before a court or, if appropriate, another independent and impartial tribunal or body.’

continuum of institutions that require strengthening, through the judicial system: namely, the political parties; the Political Parties Disputes Tribunal; and the IEBC. These have to comply with the Constitution, and the electoral laws and regulations.

Election petitions are a judicial mechanism for resolving post-election disputes. With an awareness of the entirety of EDR mechanisms available in Kenya towards the resolution of both pre-election and post-election disputes, and the legal framework and principles that underlie the electoral system in Kenya, this paper focuses on the litigation of election petitions. In doing so, the paper looks into the parameters and tools for managing team dynamics in litigating election petitions.

2 Election Petitions
Election petitions are instituted in court subsequent to the declaration of election results by IEBC’s returning officers. In Hassan Ali Joho & Another v Suleiman Said Shahbal & 2 Others, the Supreme Court stated:

Insofar as the Constitution (Article 87(2)) provides that: “Petitions concerning an election other than a presidential election, shall be filed within twenty-eight days after the declaration of the election results…,” while the Elections Act, 2011 (Section 76 (1)) provides that: “A petition – a. to question the validity of an election shall be filed within twenty-eight days after the date of publication of the results of the election in the Gazette…,” and as it is clear that expedition in the disposal of electoral disputes is a fundamental principle under the Constitution, we hold the said provision of the Elections Act to be inconsistent with the terms of the Constitution.

Election petitions can arise in respect of presidential, parliamentary and county elections and include by-elections. Presidential elections concern elections to the office of President. Articles 140, 163(3)(a), and 165(5)(a) of the Constitution of Kenya, 2010 (the Constitution) give the Supreme Court exclusive original and final jurisdiction to hear and determine disputes relating to presidential elections. Parliamentary elections concern elections of members of the National Assembly or the Senate, which together comprise Members of the Parliament of Kenya. Article 105(1) of the Constitution gives the High Court jurisdiction to hear and determine any question as to whether a person has been validly elected as a Member of Parliament, or whether the seat of a Member of Parliament has become vacant.

County elections concern elections of county governors and members of county assemblies. Section 75(1) of the Elections Act, 2011 gives the High Court within the county or nearest to the affected county, jurisdiction in respect of a question as to the validity of an election of a county governor. On the other hand, section 75(1A) of the Elections Act, 2011 gives Resident Magistrates Courts to be designated as such by the Chief Justice, jurisdiction in respect of a question as to the validity of the election of a member of a county assembly (MCA).

9 Articles 136-140 of the Constitution of Kenya, 2010 concern election of the president; qualifications and disqualifications for election as president; procedure at presidential election; procedure to be followed in case of death of a president-elect after being declared elected as president, but before assuming office; and questions as to validity of presidential election.

11 Articles 177 and 193 of the Constitution of Kenya, 2010 concern the membership of county assembly and qualifications for election as member of county assembly; Article 180 of the Constitution concerns election of county governor and deputy county governor.
Election petitions are heard and determined by an election court. Section 2 of the Elections Act, 2011 defines an ‘election court’ to mean: ‘the Supreme Court in exercise of the jurisdiction conferred upon it by Article 163 (3) (a) or the High Court in the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred upon it by Article 165 (3) (a) of the Constitution and the Resident Magistrate’s Court designated by the Chief Justice in accordance with section 75 of [the Elections] Act.’

Litigating election petitions often brings together more than one advocate or firm to represent a party to the dispute (litigation team). The subsequent parts of this paper consider the dynamics of litigating election petitions in teams, especially in terms of the stringent timelines and special procedures in respect of election petitions that necessitate the need to manage litigation team dynamics towards an ultimate desirable and expeditious resolution of an election petition.

3 Litigating Election Petitions

The special nature of election petitions as a component of the larger EDR mechanisms makes them complex, urgent, and demanding of thought and skill. As a result, a one-man job may not be able to pull through, thereby necessitating the need for a litigation team for the proper execution of an election petition. There are stringent timelines to be met. There are special laws and rules of procedure applicable in the context of election petitions. There is need to strategize quickly to best represent your client and outsmart the opponent. There is urgent need for research and analysis of voluminous documents, including documents and materials to be relied on as evidence, and the opponent’s pleadings. There is need to draft proper and stellar pleadings to articulate your client’s case with accuracy, correctness and completeness. There is limited time to present the best and winning argument before the election court covering all the vital aspects of your client’s case.

These multiple components involved in the litigation of election petitions necessitates that a litigation team be on top of their game. Rebecca Green notes the information imbalance that may arise in post-election dispute resolution based on the expertise and preparedness of a litigation team in comparison to the opponent; an imbalance which may have devastating effects for both the candidate (the client) and the voters:

One campaign might hire a sophisticated legal team that understands how various process decisions affect its candidate. If the other campaign has not hired a sophisticated election attorney (or if the attorney hired proves to be less skillful than opposing counsel) this imbalance might prove a great disadvantage. This disadvantage is not just problematic for the candidate, but also for the voters who selected that candidate. In a recount scenario, poor or uninformed lawyering can result in the disenfranchisement of voters. (...) [S]tate election administrators and judges also vary widely in process sophistication.13

That notwithstanding, generally, and as concerns election petitions, litigating in teams is wrought with both advantages and disadvantages.14 Election petitions in particular tend to draw large litigation teams. The outstanding advantage of such large litigation teams includes the ability to divide up the necessary tasks and the various issues that are up for determination amongst the advocates or firms based on their skill sets and expertise. Dividing up the tasks and issues among the advocates or firms constituting a litigation team is actually necessary to allow an advocate or team of advocates to pay special and particular attention to one or two issues, keeping in mind the tight timelines for the hearing and determination of election petitions. The disposal of election petitions is done on the foundation of expeditious disposal of matters and in tandem with article 87(1) of the Constitution, ‘timely settling of election disputes’.

4 Timelines and Procedure in Respect of Election Petitions

Section 85 of the Elections Act, 2011 is categorical that an election petition is to be heard and determined within the period specified in the Constitution. The timelines and procedure in respect of election petitions are provided for in the Constitution, the Elections Act, 2011, Elections (Parliamentary and County Elections) Petitions Rules, 2017, as applicable to parliamentary and county elections,\(^{15}\) the Court of Appeal (Election Petition) Rules, 2017, and the Supreme Court (Presidential Election Petition) Rules, 2017. Rule 4(1) of the Elections (Parliamentary and County Elections) Petitions Rules, 2017 is categorical that the objective of the Rules is to facilitate the just, expeditious, proportionate, and affordable resolution of election petitions, in this case, parliamentary and county elections.

Rule 8 of the Elections (Parliamentary and County Elections) Petitions Rules, 2017 provides for the form and content of a parliamentary or county election petition. The election petition, which is supported by an affidavit sworn by the Petitioner,\(^{16}\) is drafted using Form 1 in the First Schedule of the Rules. The election petition is divided into paragraphs confined to a distinct subject and numbered consecutively. The election petition will state: the name and address of the petitioner; the date when the election in dispute was conducted; the results of the election, if any, and however declared; the date of the declaration of the results of the election; the grounds on which the petition is presented; and the name and address of the petitioner’s advocate, if any, which shall be the address for service.

\(^{15}\) As provided in rule 3 of the Elections (Parliamentary and County Elections) Petitions Rules, 2017, the rules only apply in respect of election of members of Parliament, county governors, and members of county assemblies. Rule 2 defines an “election court” to mean “the High Court in the exercise of the jurisdiction conferred upon it by Article 165 (3)(a) of the Constitution or the Resident Magistrate’s Court designated by the Chief Justice in accordance with section 75 of the [Elections] Act.”

\(^{16}\) See Ibid rules 8(4)(b) and 12.
The election petition will also set out the relief(s) sought, such as a declaration on whether or not the candidate whose election is questioned was validly elected; a declaration of which candidate was validly elected; an order as to whether a fresh election should be held; scrutiny and recounting of the ballots cast at the election in dispute; payment of costs; or a determination as to whether or not electoral malpractice of a criminal nature may have occurred.

IEBC is a Respondent in every election petition.\(^{17}\) A response to a parliamentary or county election petition is filed within seven (7) days of service of the petition on the Respondents and is drafted as in Form 4 in the First Schedule to the Rules.\(^{18}\)

The precise timelines and procedure in respect of election petitions as concerns the various political offices can be summarised as follows:

6 Conclusion
Litigation teams handling election petitions, like in other matters, must adhere to professional rules and guidelines for advocates under the Advocates Act (Cap 16) and the attendant practice rules and regulations in their interactions with one another. Professional etiquette and civility in personal interactions and correspondences is necessary, especially timely service and response to pleadings. In any case, litigating election petitions requires the sacrifice of time in terms of working long hours into the night to be able to file stellar pleadings within the stipulated timelines.
